

[1] Exhibit A?

[2] MR. WYNKOOP: Yes, Your Honor. It is

[3] Exhibit A.

[4] THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

[5] THE WITNESS: Can I move the [6] microphone, please?

[7] THE COURT: Yes.

[8] THE WITNESS: Ari, I came here today
[9] wanting to tell you 100 things about me. I wanted
[10] to humanize myself to you. I would have told you
[11] how I aspire to be a fashion designer one day. I [12] have four pets. I was born and raised in New York.

[13] I am Jewish. I love to travel. My parents are [14] small business owners. I dye my hair red. I love
[15] to buy shoes. I used to bite my nails. I have a [16] younger brother. The list can go on.

[17] I only told you ten things about [18] myself. People say that if you tell a serial killer
[19] personal details about yourself, they are less [20] likely to kill you. If you knew anything about me [21] before February 25, 2018, would you still have [22] assaulted me that night?

[23] After the assault, I was [24] inconsolable. When I stepped back into my dorm
[25] room, I wasn't ready to take my clothes off. I

[1] wasn't ready to touch myself. I just wanted to lay [2] there in silence. After a few hours, I had the [3] strength to go to my desk, grab a makeup wipe, and [4] take off my makeup. I looked at myself in the [5] mirror. My eyes were puffy, and my face was [6] flushed. I got up from the desk and walked over to [7] the full-length mirror at my door.

[8] I just stood there looking at the [9] clothes I was wearing, blacked ripped jeans from [10] American Eagle and a maroon tank top from Free [11] People. I started by taking off my shirt and then [12] my pants and then my bra and then my underwear. I [13] looked at myself in the mirror and started to cry.
[14] I could see the bruises forming on my left thigh. I [15] could feel the pain in my wrist from being grabbed [16] so tightly. I felt incredibly dirty and disgusting, [17] so I decided to shower.

[18] I showered for a while. I stood [19] there with the hot water pouring over me not even [20] washing my body. I didn't want to touch the places
[21] you touched. I cried as the water fell down -- fell [22] onto my face through my hair and down my back. I [23] watched the water go into the drain and just stared [24] down at the floor for what felt like an eternity.

[25] I took some soap and finally began to [1] wash myself. I did it as quickly as possible. I

 [2] hated the feeling. I didn't want to be near myself.
 [3] After I got out of the shower, I brushed my teeth
 [4] and went back to bed. I stayed curled up in a ball
 [5] for the entire day. When I had woken up that [6] morning, I texted a close friend at the time, [REDACTED]
 [REDACTED]
 [REDACTED] I told her everything you did to me
 [9] the night before. She immediately asked to come [10] over and check in on me. [REDACTED] my [11] freshman year roommate, was not in my dorm room when [12] I got there and didn't come back until the [13] afternoon. I had the room to myself and just wanted [14] to continue being alone.
 [15] [REDACTED] did end up coming over, and we [16] spoke about what I told her earlier that morning. I
 [17] honestly don't remember how long of a conversation
 [18] it was. I just know that she asked me if I wanted
 [19] to report it. My immediate answer was no. I said
 [20] that I didn't want to be the reason the fraternity
 [21] gets shut down. I know what happens when girls come [22] forward against members of a fraternity.
 [23] I know that they can get suspended or [24] lose their charger, and I didn't want to be the [25] reason that happened because of one bad guy.

[1] Moreover, all of [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]'s friends were [2] pledging at AEPi. It wasn't just any fraternity to [3] them or to me. It was our favorite house to go to.
 [4] How could I be the one to take that away from them?
 [5] After [REDACTED] left [REDACTED] texted
 [6] me. She was another close friend of mine at the [7] time. She lived across the hall from [REDACTED] and me, [8] and she asked me how my night was. I told her what [9] happened. She also asked to come over immediately [10] to check in on me.
 [11] I let her come in, and I stayed in [12] bed as I told her the details of my assault. She [13] asked me if I was hurt, so I stood up. It had been [14] hours since I last looked at my leg, but the bruise
 [15] had gotten darker and bigger. She looked at my leg [16] and back at me and asked the same question that [17] [REDACTED] did. Do you want to report it?
 [18] I gave her the same answer that I
 [19] gave [REDACTED] and then she left, and I went back to [20] bed. I don't remember much from the rest of the [21] day. It was a mix of laying in bed crying, watching [22] Netflix, and sleeping. Even when I was able to [23] sleep, I couldn't rest for a while as I would be [24] woken up by the sound of your voice in my head and [25] reliving the torture you put me through.

[1] I had nightmares about you for [2] months. To this day, I still have trouble sleeping.
 [3] In the months following the assault, I often woke up
 [4] in the middle of the night having panic attacks. I [5] would be out of breath, feeling like my world was [6] caving in on me. I kept telling myself that the [7] nightmares would eventually go away.
 [8] I knew that you were a junior, and I
 [9] would never have to worry about seeing you ever [10] again after one more year. I felt that I could [11] avoid you so long as I never stepped foot in that [12] house again.
 [13] The first adult I told was my [14] therapist. When I told my therapist the details of [15] what happened that night, she asked me the very same
 [16] question that [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] did when I told them.
 [17] Do you want to report it? My answer still remained [18] as no. My therapist and I also talked about when, [19] slash, how I would tell my parents. That was [20] probably the toughest part of our conversations.
 [21] Talking to your parents about sex is [22] awkward enough. But how do you tell them that [23] someone violated you and took advantage of your [24] body? I felt panic just thinking about having to [25] tell them, so I waited until I felt ready.

[1] Over my spring break during the first [2] week of March of 2018, I told my mom. I told her [3] the day before I was returning back to Temple for [4] the remainder of the semester. I couldn't look at [5] her in the eyes when I said it. She sat down on my [6] bed and just began to cry. She was upset that for [7] about two weeks I had been keeping this all to [8] myself.
 [9] I had conversations with her on the [10] phone acting like everything in my life was normal.
 [11] She wasn't upset with me for keeping this from her.
 [12] She was upset because she couldn't protect me from [13] this. I'm not a mother. I can't empathize with the [14] way she must have felt, but I can only imagine the [15] pain she felt that day when I told her about you [16] holding me down against my will and forcing me to do [17] things with my body that I explicitly said no to [18] over and over again.
 [19] No mother should have to hear that.
 [20] After I told her, she asked me the same question
 [21] that [REDACTED], [REDACTED] and my therapist all asked me.
 [22] Do you want to report it? My answer was still no.
 [23] I had told two important adults in my [24] life, but there was still my dad. I speak to my [25] parents every single day. Every morning when I wake

[1] up and I'm on my way to class, I call my parents. I
[2] call them every night before I go to bed or before I
[3] go out somewhere. I have an incredibly open and [4] honest relationship with the both of them. Keeping [5] this from them, especially my dad, was one of the [6] hardest things I've had to do.

[7] I ended up telling my dad in the [8] beginning of April when I went to my grandparents'
[9] house in Florida for the weekend of Passover. One [10] of the nights I was there, I sat my dad down and [11] told him everything. I couldn't stop crying. He [12] was so angry. He wanted to take action like any dad [13] would because someone hurt his daughter.

[14] But he respected whatever choice I
[15] wanted to make and said he would support me no
[16] matter what. I knew that he wanted me to report it
[17] the minute I told him. And I could see the sadness
[18] in his eyes when he asked me, Do you want to report [19] it? And I told him, No.

[20] When I returned to school, I tried my [21] best to get back into my old routine. I went to [22] class. I studied. I went out with friends, and I
[23] even went out on the weekends. I still had severe [24] anxiety and experienced panic attacks from time to [25] time. But I was lucky enough to have friends at

[1] home, school, and now three adults in my life whom I [2] could confide in.

[3] But during the second week of April,
[4] my world was rocked again. I was walking back from [5] one of my art classes down Liacouras Walk to go back [6] to Morgan Hall, and there you were. I felt like my [7] soul had left by body. I was paralyzed with fear.
[8] I thought maybe you wouldn't recognize me or even [9] look my way, but you did. You stared right at me, [10] and I could see it in your eyes. You knew exactly [11] who I was.

[12] I ran as fast as I could to Morgan [13] Hall. I cried the entire way through the lobby and [14] up the elevator. And once I got to my room, I paced [15] around in a panic. I grabbed my phone, and I called [16] [REDACTED]. She was the very first person I saw [17] the night you assaulted me. I remember her asking [18] if I was okay that night, and I felt speechless.
[19] The only word I could say was, No. It was the only [20] word I had been saying for the last half hour.

[21] Later that same week, I told [REDACTED]
[22] what happened that night. She just wanted to make [23] sure that I was okay and that she was here to [24] support me. We didn't really discuss the topic of [25] reporting it at the time.

[1] [REDACTED] came straight up to my room and [2] tried talking me down. I was hysterically crying
[3] and felt like I was unable to breathe, all from just [4] seeing you on campus. She then asked me, Do you [5] want to report it? And for the first time, after [6] two months of wanting to remain silent and after [7] [REDACTED] my therapist, and my mom and dad had [8] asked me, I finally said yes.

[9] I think it's important that you know
[10] how many people asked me whether or not I wanted to [11] report the assault before I actually did it. Every [12] single one of these people respected the word "no."
[13] They didn't go ahead and report it against my own
[14] will. They didn't try to convince me that my answer [15] was wrong. They accepted my answer for what it was [16] because they knew that no means no. Clearly that [17] was a word you couldn't comprehend.

[18] I called the Temple Police Department
[19] that day and spoke to Detective Aitken for the very [20] first time. I told him briefly over the phone what [21] had happened, but he said I would have to come into [22] the office to file an official report. The [23] following morning, [REDACTED] came with me to file that [24] report. She stuck by my side and made sure that I [25] never felt alone through any part of the process.

[1] When I sat down with Aitken, I began
[2] to tell him every single detail of the assault, [3] forcing me to relive it -- relive the event in that [4] moment. What I didn't know was that I would be [5] reliving it over and over again. I told him how the [6] night started out. I told him how much I had to [7] drink. I told him what I was wearing. I told him
[8] what time I arrived at the AEPi house. I told him [9] what time I went upstairs with you. I told him what [10] happened in that room. I told him how I was able to [11] get out. I told him everything.

[12] After filing my report with Detective [13] Aitken, he asked me multiple times if I was [14] absolutely positive that I wanted to go through with [15] this. He said that this was just the beginning and [16] that I may lose friends. I didn't believe him, of [17] course. I was naive and was convinced that this [18] process would be smooth sailing because I had [19] evidence and people who supported me by my side.

[20] No one tells you that once you commit
[21] to this, you can't back out. It's all or nothing, [22] and I went all in. And it wasn't just for me. Of [23] course I wanted justice, but I couldn't help but [24] think about other girls who might be out there. If [25] you could do what you did to me and get away with

[1] it, who's to say you wouldn't do it to someone else.
[2] Following my meeting with Detective
[3] Aitken, I went to SVU and met with Detective
[4] Enriquez. Again, I had to retell the same story
[5] including every grueling detail. At that point, I [6] was done for just a little bit. All I had to do was [7] wait. It wasn't long before I received a call from [8] the Philadelphia District Attorney's Office telling [9] me that they wanted to take action. I had enough [10] evidence to go to trial and prove beyond a [11] reasonable doubt that you assaulted me. I was ready [12] to get my well-deserved justice.

[13] The feeling of joy and empowerment in [14] receiving justice was fleeting. While the physical [15] assault took place on February 25, 2018, it felt [16] like I was under perpetual assault for the two years
[17] that followed. The year of 2018 was the worst year [18] of my life. My friends began to drop like flies.
[19] First, it was [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] at [20] the beginning of my summer going into sophomore [21] year.

[22] Then a few months later, it was [REDACTED]
[23] [REDACTED] and every other friend I made over the course [24] of my freshman year. I've never lost so many [25] friends in such a short amount of time. Every

[1] Friends are supposed to support you
[2] through thick and thin. This experience is [3] extremely unique, and I know that it is tasking to [4] ask your friends to stick with you through something [5] as painful and traumatizing as this. However, my [6] friends should have stayed. Their friendships with [7] the brothers at AEPi proved to be more important [8] than their friendships with me.

[9] But this statement is not about them.
[10] I'm not sharing the details of every lost friendship [11] I had to get back at them. I'm sharing these [12] details because it all ties back to one thing, the [13] assault. If it weren't for you and for what you did [14] to me, none of this would have happened.

[15] I wouldn't have lost any of my [16] friends. I wouldn't have had to move out of my own [17] apartment. I wouldn't have had to worry about [18] people knowing who I was or even be embarrassed by [19] it. Because of you, I lost everything. I lost my [20] friends, my home, my privacy, my confidence, and my [21] control. I ended up being the person to shoulder [22] the burden of what you did to me.

[23] Moving into my new apartment
[24] sophomore year took a major financial toll on my [25] family. We couldn't break the lease on the old

[1] single one of these girls ended their friendships [2] with me due to the fact that my trauma and this very [3] trial was too much for them to handle. These are [4] all girls I was living with for the first half of my [5] sophomore year. So once my relationships with them
[6] fell apart, I was forced to move out of my own [7] apartment.

[8] In addition to moving out, I was also [9] faced with the fact that one of [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]'s [10] friends, [REDACTED], took it upon herself to tell [11] a member of the 2018 pledge class of AEPi that I was [12] the girl that you assaulted. He shared this [13] information with the rest of his fellow class. My [14] anonymity was broken, and I had to start my life all [15] over again at Temple.

[16] Everyone left me behind and took your [17] side. But the torture didn't stop at those lost
[18] friendships. One of those very girls, [REDACTED] [19] [REDACTED], decided to voluntarily testify on your [20] behalf. The alliance that these girls had with the [21] members of Alpha Epsilon Pi is beyond me. It's [22] frightening to witness the power you had and [23] continue to have over the brothers who belonged to [24] the fraternity as well as the women who associated [25] with it.

[1] apartment, and now we were paying for a new one.
[2] This is in addition to my weekly therapy and the [3] multiple trips I made back and forth from [4] Philadelphia to New York, as well as the trips my [5] parents made to me in case I needed them. I felt [6] like a stressor to my own family, not just [7] emotionally but now financially.

[8] At this point I had lost all my [9] friends and had to start from scratch. But there
[10] was one person at Temple from when this all started [11] who never left my side, and she is [REDACTED]. If [12] it weren't for [REDACTED], I don't know how I would have [13] kept pushing forward. [REDACTED] was there when I [14] decided to report.

[15] She was always a text or call away
[16] when I needed to talk. She helped me move out of my [17] apartment. And she even hung out with me every [18] weekend until I got back up on my feet and found a [19] whole new friend group. I am eternally grateful for [20] people like [REDACTED]. Because of her, I was able to [21] surround myself with individuals at Temple who [22] reflected her personality, compassion, and support [23] towards others.

[24] As I began to turn my life around, I
[25] continue to face challenges left and right. I

[1] didn't know that my case would get as much attention [2] as it did. I knew that there was a possibility of [3] talk around Temple. There is always gossip. But I [4] wasn't expecting to be reading about my assault on [5] Twitter or Facebook or the many news articles and [6] videos that came out about it.

[7] I was simply known as the 18-year-old
[8] student. I was anonymous, but I knew I was being [9] talked about. I would dig myself into these deep [10] holes, unable to stop myself from reading stories [11] and comments about me, seeing what people would have [12] to say. And, of course, I couldn't even escape it [13] when I was off my phone.

[14] Multiple times, I have been in [15] classrooms when the subject of my assault came up.
[16] Of course, no one knew it was me, or at least I [17] didn't think anyone did. But do you know what it's [18] like to have people discuss the details of your [19] assault right in front of your face; to ask [20] questions to the teacher as if they know what's [21] going on; or to make predictions and say they know
[22] all the details and start sharing some twisted [23] version of the real story?

[24] It's awful. I have been [25] re-traumatized at my own classes at Temple

[1] the same questions over and over again.

[2] The sole reason your lawyer wanted to [3] have this hearing in the first place was to try to [4] find evidence to discredit me. I'm not sure what [5] evidence your attorney was trying to get at a [6] hearing that could have then been used at this [7] trial. But the only thing that would have been [8] discovered at such a hearing, had it happened, is [9] that I said no, and that wasn't good enough for you.

[10] The beginning of this case took place
[11] during my freshman year at Temple University.
[12] Today, I am a senior. I wouldn't say that this [13] event defines my entire college experience, but it [14] has taken up a portion of every year I've been in [15] college. And every day I'm on campus, I witness the [16] location of where I was assaulted.

[17] I don't go out of my way to find that [18] house. But your castle on the corner is half a [19] block away from where all of my classes are. I'm [20] triggered every single day I'm on Temple's campus [21] because of you. 2000 North Broad Street has been [22] uninhabited for two years since AEPi lost their [23] charter. As I walk past that house or see it from [24] down the block, the lights were always off. No one [25] was going in or out of the house.

[1] University, unable to escape the assault because it
[2] made national headlines. All of this pressure and [3] attention gave me extreme anxiety and still does [4] today. I hated the fact that there were news
[5] reporters standing outside the courthouse. I hated [6] it even more that I had to sit next to a reporter in [7] this very courtroom during closing statements and [8] during the verdict. Perfect strangers now know my [9] name, know my story, and have made it available for [10] the world to see. I never wanted or asked for that.

[11] Compounding the stress of this court
[12] case was the prospect of your return to Temple [13] University before the trial even concluded. At the [14] insistence of your lawyer, under the protection [15] afforded to you as a student, Temple University was [16] pushing to have its own student conduct hearing [17] about the incident to determine if you would be [18] permitted to attend school in the fall of 2019.

[19] I believe a student should be given
[20] the same due process that any person would in a [21] criminal proceeding. But I do not believe that you [22] or your attorney honestly ever thought you would or [23] ever intended to step foot back on campus again. It [24] was simply a move to add even more stress to my life
[25] knowing how difficult it would be for me to answer

[1] There was comfort in knowing the [2] place where you assaulted me was empty. And now
[3] that comfort has been stripped away from me. This [4] summer, a new fraternity moved into that house. The [5] lights are on. People are moving in and out of the [6] house. And the worst part, I know your bedroom is [7] being occupied by someone else.

[8] Someone is now living in the space
[9] where you attacked me. It's hard for me to live [10] with that. But it's going to be even harder to see [11] that house back in action once again. I know that [12] it was you that hurt me, not the house itself. But [13] that house fostered an environment in which you [14] could become and act the way that you did. That [15] house gave you the space to believe that it was okay [16] to sexually assault another person.

[17] One night changed my entire life. In [18] a matter of 30 minutes, you were able to damage me.
[19] Physically, the bruises you caused went away within [20] a few weeks. Mentally, I don't think I will ever [21] fully heal. Beyond the lost friendships and the [22] agony of every challenging step I had to take to [23] find my place back at Temple, I was faced with a new [24] issue that has made my life more difficult than I [25] could ever imagine.

[1] I was, and still am, triggered
[2] through every intimate encounter or relationship I [3] have with a man who is not you. Any type of [4] romantic relationship I had after the assault all [5] resulted in failure due to my inability to trust.
[6] The feeling of a hand on the back of my head, the [7] sound of shushing, or being unable to move a part of [8] my body during any encounter triggers me and sends [9] me back to that night.

[10] In just 30 minutes, you instilled a [11] fear that I may carry in every future intimate [12] experience I have in my life. That is not fair. I [13] deserve to trust people because I am the type of [14] person who chooses to see the good in others. I [15] chose to see the good in you, Ari.

[16] I believed what you said to me that [17] night. And I followed you expecting an enjoyable, [18] friendly, relaxing experience. Instead, I was held [19] down against my will, screaming for help and for you [20] to stop hurting me.

[21] The word "no" has, quote/unquote,
[22] many shades of gray, according to your lawyer, Mr.
[23] Perry de Marco. I'm here to tell you that the word [24] "no" means only one thing. No means no. I didn't [25] think I would be here today giving a vocabulary

[1] attempted sexual assault, one for attempted forcible
[2] compulsion, and one for indecent assault. I am
[3] lucky. I was fortunate to have a team of people
[4] like Lauren Stram, Zach Wynkoop, Detective Aitken, [5] and Detective Enriquez, who fought tirelessly for my [6] case.

[7] I was fortunate to have a support
[8] team that guided me through the lowest of lows of my [9] life and never let me back down from this fight.
[10] Despite all of the odds against me, I now stand [11] before you to speak the words you tried to silence.
[12] And now I have come to see justice finally be [13] served.

[14] But still, to this day, I am scared
[15] to be in the same room as you. I will never be able [16] to live down the physical and mental torture you put [17] me through on the night of February 25, 2018, as [18] well as the two years that followed. You will [19] always continue to reserve unwanted space in my [20] mind. I will have to live with this pain for the [21] rest of my life.

[22] When I decided to come forward in [23] April of 2018, I knew I had options besides going to [24] the police. I tried to stay silent. I tried to [25] cope on my own. I tried to find a path to heal that

[1] lesson. But I want to make it clear to you and all [2] men like you that had you stopped what you were [3] doing the moment that word came out of my mouth, we [4] wouldn't be in this room right now. There wouldn't [5] have been a trial. You wouldn't have been arrested.
[6] Your fraternity may have still been standing had you
[7] stopped at the word "no."

[8] I think you know how challenging it [9] is for women to come forward because of the [10] disruption it causes in their life afterwards. And [11] my case, in many ways, validates your belief. One [12] in five women are sexually assaulted while in [13] college. Women in college between the ages of 18
[14] and 24 are three times more likely to be assaulted [15] than the average woman.

[16] Only 20 percent of student victims
[17] report to law enforcement. About 5.7 percent of the [18] perpetrators are arrested. Only 1.1 percent of [19] perpetrators go to trial, and .7 percent of [20] perpetrators are convicted of a felony. The odds [21] were against me. And with the agony I endured for [22] the last two years, I truly understand why.

[23] I will never forget the moment on [24] February 18, 2020, when Juror No. 9 read out the [25] verdict "guilty" three times in a row, one for

[1] didn't involve law enforcement. And I'm not saying [2] that this path I have chosen has healed me in any [3] way. It's far from it. If anything, I've put [4] myself through more hurt by going through with this.

[5] However, if given a second chance to [6] do it all over again, I would still report it. I
[7] would endure every last bit of pain and suffering [8] over and over again if it meant that I helped [9] prevent you from ever doing this to another woman.

[10] There are millions of women just like [11] me, but they aren't given the same opportunity I [12] have today, being able to stand here telling you how [13] you detrimentally impacted my life. This is my [14] finish line. It isn't yours. I don't know what [15] your fate will be after today, but my goal in coming [16] forward was never to put you behind bars. I had to [17] stand up for myself.

[18] I didn't deserve what happened to me [19] on February 25, 2018, or the two years that [20] followed. I needed my voice to be heard, and I
[21] needed you to face the consequences of your actions.
[22] It's not up to me what those consequences may be.
[23] But my wish is that this statement made you feel [24] what a group of 12 jurors found you as, guilty.

[25] In the beginning of this statement, I

[1] told you I came here wanting to tell you 100 things [2] about me. Instead, I told you ten, and I'm going to [3] tell you ten more. My favorite ice cream is [4] chocolate fudge brownie from Ben & Jerry's. I cried
[5] at the end of Toy Story 3. I'm bad at math.
[6] Spiders scare me. My favorite book is The Art of [7] Racing in the Rain. I am an Aries. My favorite [8] city is Amsterdam. I am someone's daughter. I am
[9] someone's sister. I am someone's friend.

[10] I hope you can see me as more than my [11] body, what you reduced me to on the night you [12] assaulted me.

[13] THE COURT: Thank you.

[14] MR. WYNKOOP: Your Honor, I would [15] mark as C-1, in its entirety, including Exhibit A [16] and B, Commonwealth's sentencing memorandum. It was [17] filed with the Court approximately one month ago.

[18] I am not now going to rehash the [19] entirety of that memorandum. Instead, I am going to [20] ask the Court to focus on what I think are three [21] salient points from that memorandum and three [22] salient points from the trial. And I'm going to ask [23] the Court to consider them when sentencing.

[24] The first is -- and I touch on it in [25] the sentencing memorandum -- what the Commonwealth

[1] has referred to as an absence of mitigation. And I
[2] understand that that sounds like an odd phrase in [3] this case when there are 34 examples of character [4] witnesses coming forward on behalf of the defendant.

[5] But I think the absence of mitigation [6] breaks down like this. The first is referring to [7] the presentence investigation and mental health [8] reports. As Your Honor, who has heard probably [9] hundreds of these cases, knows, in cases like this, [10] when a presentencing investigation or a mental [11] health report is filed after a trial, you expect to [12] see what would be described as a traumatic [13] upbringing.

[14] I don't think anybody in this room
[15] doesn't know the old adage that hurt people, hurt [16] people. And so, oftentimes, in cases like this, in [17] cases that are, I think, some of the most serious in [18] the criminal justice system, we often see a [19] childhood that, while not excusing what a defendant
[20] did, at least explains to us how they ended up [21] there.

[22] And as the Court is well-aware, not a
[23] single one of those factors was present here. 34 [24] people came forward on behalf of the defendant after [25] being convicted. That shows a family background and
